Five Wiccan Wind Spells

Earliest cultures believed that they could prevent or create storms by invoking ancient spirits. Orisha Oya embodies the huge Hurricanes which traveled from Africa to the Caribbean every year. Ancient Mesopotamian cultures believed that wind spirits could be destructive similar to the "Aires" of Central America.

Storm Stopper Spell

Gather the following:

Frankincense
1 hematite stone
Deep blue glitter

As you see the storm approaching (or hear of it on the news) draw a pentacle on the ground outside your home with your wand or your finger. Place the frankincense on the pentacle. Place your wand on the pentacle and holding the hematite stone chant:

Goddess of the storm
Send this storm away from me!

Take some of the glitter and allow it to fall from your hand and over the pentacle and into the wind. Leave the stone as offering for the Goddess.

Knotted Charms

You can control the weather by knot magic. First, get a thick, long cord. Make a series of nine knots on it, three at a time. The first three are to control a breeze, the second three are for a strong wind and the third three are to control a stronger, gale force wind.

While making these knots, visualize and seal your intentions on the knots.

When you need to control the wind, untie the first three to summon a breeze. Then gradually untie the next three for a stronger wind and finally untie the third series of 3 knots for a hurricane in your neighborhood!

Women's Powers

Ancient cultures believed that a woman during childbirth and soon after the birth, has the power to control wind. At this time, all you have to do is go outside and take a mouthful of air. Return inside and expel it in a short burst, a large burst or a gale force burst. That is the magick of childbirth.

Dancing Leaves Spell

To make the leaves on a tree dance, go outside, hold out your arms and say thus:
Oh wind, Oh Air
Make the leaves dance
So let it be.

When you see the leaves more, dance with glee. Offer the tree a libation for its help.

Call a wind spell

-----

Go outside and chant:
veneere ventoos veneere
seenere soloos senteere relaxaree
veneere noonc noonc veneere veneere veneere veneere!

And the winds will arrive!
